The Architects Golf Club

Each of the course's holes pays homage to a legendary golf architect.

- Hole 2 - Honors Charles Blair Macdonald (1855-1939), considered the father of American golf course design.
- Hole 7 - Recreates the style of A.W. Tillinghast (1876-1942), who coined the term "birdie" and designed championship venues at Baltusrol and Ridgewood in New Jersey.
- Hole 18 - Is a tribute to Robert Trent Jones (1906-2000), who believed each hole should be "hard par, easy bogey." A prolific course designer, Jones died while this hole was under construction.

Here are a few strategies to help your score:

- Hole 1 - Pot bunkers dot both sides of this straight par 5. Avoiding them increases your chances of getting home in two.
- Hole 5 - The back half slopes to the rear. The back pin position should be bounced in from the front to roll to the flag.
- Hole 12 - Proper club selection and attention to the wind are essential, but its bowl-shaped putting surface makes the pin position tricky.

Hyatt Hills Golf Complex

This 9-hole layout is good for players of all skill levels. Follow these tips from their course tour:

- Hole 1 - This hole will help the golfer with a downhill roll to the green. Pro placement is left side of fairway.
- Hole 2 - An uphill dogleg right might make you bark for your par but split the bunkers on your drive to go for two.
- Hole 3 - Don't be deceived, though it may be the shortest hole on the course, it can get you quickly!
- Hole 4 - Keeping on track here is key!
- Hole 5 - This TreeLine hole may be your best bet at a three.
- Hole 6 - Beware of the watery grave on your approach.
- Hole 7 - This signature hole stretches over the water with a bailout left. Once on, the work is not over with this tricky green.
- Hole 8 - The success of the hole really depends on the first shot. Long and dry is the best chance at a birdie.
- Hole 9 - This closing up hill hole may tire you; but only lets you rest when you're in the Clubhouse.
